Halloween is a time when many of us indulge in a little creativity by dressing up in festive costumes or telling ghost stories around the bonfire in the backyard. But the neighborhood ghouls and goblins (and fantasy fans too!) that descend on San Diego for Comic-Con (which we love for its all-around nerdiness, but you already knew that) can get just as creative. Just last week, we announced that we'd be covering the Costume Gala, and we're proud to unveil several costume contests here on Colorburned, so you can show off your costume pride to the world and win a prize! We've also compiled a list of all the competitions you can enter, below, so you can tell the horde you're the best Monster Man or Queen in your neighborhood. Ready? Get Set... The Costume Gala panel is moderated by Costume Designer Raya Alansuu, who will also be showing off a couple of pieces from her upcoming collection. But the real headliner of the night is Jacob Brooks, who will be doing a Q&A session that covers his entire life and career as a musician, artist, writer, and designer. Tune in to the Costume Gala panel on Thursday, March 2, to see them! As a Photoshop fiend, I wanted to create my own style of fan art. I decided to make illustrations of the Monster Masters, with the addition of Monster Hunter musculature and skulls, to turn them into Creature Art. I'd love to see what you create if you enter our costume contest! As a comic book artist, I'd love to share what it was like creating Monster Hunter for the Marvel series
