HyperMotion Technology takes on-field action to a new level: it allows players to control the ball more precisely and with more freedom of movement than ever before. Players can now predict the trajectory of the ball before contact is made and perform more well-timed, in-the-moment decisions. The ball is more responsive. The main goal of HyperMotion is to increase player immersion in the experience of playing a real-life game, and to enhance a realistic, immersive football experience that's closer to the real thing. Players can also trigger the animations of their movement through the game by using the pre-cancellation, or the trigger, button. The purpose of this button is to activate the ability to cancel the player's movement if the player does not want to use that animation, without taking him out of the game. This allows the player to choose his animation according to the situation. New to FIFA 22 is the "Real Team Talk" feature. This enables players to communicate with their teammates on the pitch as if they are standing right beside them, pointing at the player with the ball and using them to send instructions. The "Real Team Talk" feature also includes a new feature called the "Second Pass Mentions." When one of the players on the pitch receives a cross, the player is presented with a screen where he can receive instructions regarding his next pass. FIFA 17 introduced many innovations and innovations to the brand's historical game engine: "Play One", which created gameplay more fluid and dynamic. The engine automatically adapts game modes to the type of player, audience and the actual situation on the pitch. In FIFA 18, "Direct Play" made individual interpretation a reality. The game engine is also able to adapt its mode to the type of player, audience and the actual situation on the pitch. FIFA 2017 introduced "Training Mode" and "Creative Play", which increased the depth of the game and changed the way players train on the pitch. In FIFA 2015, the engine was able to detect whether the ball was played or not in order to create more realistic play. FIFA 2011 brought the player models closer to the players of that time, and presented players with facial expressions to give players more personality, emotion and reactions. Fifa 22 Features Key:

- New to FIFA, Hyper-Motion Technology uses 22 suits fitted with motion capture sensors worn by real-life players, to account for the complexity and speed of the game and create lifelike movement that can't be achieved by using in-game animations. Until now, the only way to do this was to build individual animations from scratch, which would have pushed the team to create the game's 200 current-gen animations. With FMXT, we've used the thousands of recorded frames of data we have from the integration of the external sensor suits with the system to create the motions, which have been carefully tuned to the human body to provide accurate and realistic movement.
